LAST MINUTE DICTATORSHIP

Last Minute Dictatorship (Basta Ceausescu) is a road movie on the edge of European history.

In times when the borders between the west and the east are about to fall along with the Berlin Wall, three young Italians reach Ceausescu's Romania in search of adventure. Across imaginary lines their emotional journey meets the suffering and the anguish of a people living under tyranny, always dreaming of a better tomorrow.

"This story, some of the absolutely absurd situations these three guys have gotten themselves into are so hilarious and yet so warm, not only because it is a true story and we get to remake real people's experiences for cinema; but also for the infinitely resourceful drive that is the friendship between the three heroes. That said, stylistically speaking, the film does not wish to flourish anything, nor the story, nor the places, the people and least of all the realities of living in tyranny. I wish to tell people how things really were, to show them truths they may have never seen before."
